Eddington is a flourishing new community being delivered by the University of Cambridge. It is the largest single capital project in its 800-year history. Cambridge's newest district already has a primary school, community centre, supermarket and sporting facilities with more to come.

The first phase of Eddington is focussed on creating the foundations for a long-lasting and sustainable community, with some 700 homes and facilities to support new residents, neighbours and the wider Cambridge community. Join us for a day of talks and tours by the architects and professionals who have created the development, and find out more about our ambitions for this new neighbourhood. HOW TO FIND US

Cycle, pedestrian and vehicle access to Eddington is from Madingley Road (opposite High Cross) and Huntingdon Road (opposite the Hotel Felix). A cycle and pedestrian only route called the Ridgeway is also available from Bunkers Hill and Storey's Way.

SUSTAINABLE MODES OF TRANSPORT

Cycle or walk and build up your Eddington Number: Eddington is just two miles from central Cambridge - a convenient walk or cycle ride. The neighbourhood is named after Sir Arthur Eddington: a renowned physicist and also keen cyclist who devised a method of calculating distance cycling achievements. The University has launched the Eddington Number challenge to get people walking and cycling this summer where your Eddington Number is the largest number of miles cycled or walked on the same number of days. For more information visit www.eddingtonnumber.co.uk

Buses: The Universal Bus route links Cambridge Railway Station and City Centre to Eddington. For Open Eddington, all travel on the service will be free of charge. For more information about the service and its stops visit www.go-whippet.co.uk

If you do need to drive, parking is conveniently located at the Madingley Road Park & Ride with Eddington a short walk away.
